White Noise can sizzle at Sandown

By Nick Robson, Press Association

Cheltenham Festival winner White Noise can get her season off to a flyer in the Oddschecker Mares' Handicap Hurdle at Sandown. Joint trainers Kim Bailey and Mat Nicholls have been frustrated so far this term by the unseasonably quick ground and have seen a couple of other options bypassed, including a valuable race at Wetherby last week. While White Noise could probably do with a bit more rain to be seen at her best, but she should be able to stamp her class on this race back down in grade. She is rated 15lb more than all her rivals in here, and while she was a surprise winner herself of the Dawn Run in March, she had shown enough before then to prove she was on the up. Beaten on her final outing at odds-on, she can be excused for possibly being over the top and returns having had a wind operation in the off-season. Nick Scholfield's Queenie St Clair was a little out of her depth in the Welsh Champion Hurdle but should find things easier in the Visit Oddschecker.com Conditional Jockeys' Handicap Hurdle. She made giant strides last year, in the process advertising the fact that the former jockey is going to make a good fist of his new career in the training ranks. Having progressed from winning a Wincanton handicap off 105, she went on to win a £100,000 affair up at Kelso. With a run under her belt and now in a realistic grade she can resume her progress, with a step up in trip also capable of unlocking improvement from the six-year-old. Mint Approved looks a nice type for Jamie and Josh Moore in the Oddschecker Maiden Hurdle. An Irish point winner for Sean Doyle, he was second in a Plumpton bumper in March before going one better the following month when never off the bridle. The second has already won twice over hurdles so the form may be decent and this lad could make a similar introduction to obstacles. Dan Skelton's irresistible march to breaking Martin Pipe's record for number of winners in a season sees him head to Ffos Los on Sunday. He runs Ink Black Heart in the Blackmores Build Novices' Hurdle and he has already shown enough to suggest a race of this nature is within his compass. The five-year-old is actually out of an unraced half-sister to the Group One winner Powerscourt and none other than Kind, the dam of Frankel. Ink Black Heart only cost €8,000 but was fourth to the classy Bossman Jack on his first run for Tom Weston before Skelton picked him up. Second at Wetherby and then third at Exeter, a repeat of either of those efforts should see him go close and he has had his wind tinkered with ahead of this seasonal return.
