SLAINTE MHATH WORTH STICKING WITH AT HAMILTON

By Tony Kelshaw, PA

Slainte Mhath was below par at Hamilton last time out but looks worth another chance when returning there for the Usave Business Energy Specialist Fillies' Handicap. Katie Scott's mare let favourite backers down when only fifth of six behind Love De Vega but there may be a valid excuse for that disappointing display. The five-year-old was running just nine days after a decent second to Impressor on heavy ground here and could still have been feeling the effects of that effort. It was a similar story when Slainte Mhath secured a comfortable course and distance success in early July before faltering at Carlisle nine days later. She was also a cosy winner at this venue back in May, obliging both times on good to soft going, so can hopefully benefit from a 41-day break to get back on track. Love Lies looks to have a bright future following maiden and novice wins at Ayr and Newcastle but stepping up to face seasoned campaigners can be tricky, so her presence is welcomed to help boost Slainte Mhath's odds. Blue Storm returns from a much longer lay-off but still appeals in the opening novice stakes. James Tate's juvenile created a big impression when winning at Newmarket on debut and was then pitched in at the deep end in Sandown's National Stakes. The son of Blue Point faded out behind Elite Status that day after showing good early speed but has been given plenty of time to recover and is backed to control proceedings in lesser company. Iain Jardine's Bring back memories has found life tougher in handicap company since being penalised for a convincing victory at Haydock in June. However, he is favoured by the race conditions of the Big Drew Hunter Memorial Selling Stakes and is fancied to take full advantage. Over the jumps at Plumpton, Imperial Alex showed plenty of promise in handicap hurdle races towards the end of last season and looks fairly treated for his chasing debut. He stayed on well to score at Warwick before going down by just a short-head behind Coniston Clouds at Carlisle and has plenty of scope for further progress now tackling bigger obstacles in the Andrew ``Super Wack'' Jackson Memorial Novices' Handicap Chase. Harry Cobden gets on well with Call Me Rocky and they can team up to land the feature Friends & Family Remembering Norman Sharpe Handicap Hurdle. Cobden was on board when the six-year-old scored on his first start for Milton Harris at Stratford in July and again for a solid third at Uttoxeter recently. The Friends Of The Curragh Irish Cesarewitch is always a big betting heat and My Mate Mozzie is worth each-way support. Gavin Cromwell's gelding was last seen finishing a close third in the Galway Hurdle and put in a couple of fine efforts in valuable handicaps on the level last year. Although seven years old, he does not have that many miles on the clock and the feeling is that there is still a big race in him.
