WALLEM TO TAKE NOTTINGHAM WIN

By David Clough, PA

Wallem can record his second career victory in the Jockey Club Grassroots Series Middle Distance Final Handicap at Nottingham.A highly-competitive card at Colwick Park features four successive series finals, over a variety of distances, and Wallem has fine prospects in the 10-furlong division.Andrew Balding's three-year-old has significant potential to rate much higher than his current 80 - an assessment which allows him to drop in here on an ideal racing weight.Wallem has several eye-catching performances on his six-race CV to date. His victory, over half a furlong shorter than this, came in very tidy style on Wolverhampton's Tapeta surface in January.Two months later, he moved on to the Polytrack at Kempton and put up another most encouraging performance in defeat when a four-length third, despite hanging left in the straight, behind two prolific winners.Wallem was then brushed aside by the Group class Mohaafeth when nonetheless a close fourth in a good Newmarket handicap.That was no disgrace, of course - and neither was his most recent effort as a luckless length-and-a-quarter third at Sandown in a qualifier for this race two weeks ago.Returning after a five-month break, and on his first start since being gelded, Wallem was repeatedly denied a clear run but finished well when finally in the clear.He faces some useful opposition here but may well be the most favourably handicapped in the field, and has shown up well on both good ground and much softer so should not mind how much rain arrives in the Midlands.There are some potentially useful juveniles in action in maiden company before the first of the handicap finals on the card - and among them, Cave Diver is recommended.Clive Cox's Cheveley Park-owned contender in the EBF Oh So Sharp Maiden Fillies' Stakes made a promising start to her career at Haydock early last month.Cave Diver was seven lengths behind two more experienced opponents, both previously placed and one already a subsequent winner.It was notable that she managed to get as close as she did too, after starting slowly and making late progress.The move up from seven furlongs to an extended mile therefore looks a sensible move, as does the seven-week break between her first and second starts.Aristobulus must concede weight all round in the Jockey Club Grassroots Series Final Nursery Handicap, but has done enough to merit his top billing in the weights.James Ferguson's Adaay colt was only 10th of 20 last time. That, though, was in a valuable and highly competitive nursery at York - where he did not help himself with a tardy start but still made his way into contention before being beaten just under seven lengths.Aristobulus had won two of his three previous career attempts, including over this course and distance last month.He was decisively superior that day, and his return to slightly calmer waters and familiar territory could well pay off.Lockdown lurks on an enticing weight in the Jockey Club Grassroots Series Final Sprint Handicap.The three-year-old, already with his third trainer, had some worthwhile juvenile form last year - and following wind surgery, has quickly returned to the same level in his latest surroundings for George Baker.After fluffing his lines at Windsor on his first appearance in six months, he proved himself with a ready success at Kempton and - following another absence of more than 80 days - he acquitted himself well again last week when a close third behind a regular winner in a Goodwood handicap.This looks a good opportunity for further progress.Kempton stages an evening card of decent quality - especially the MansionBet Beaten By A Head Handicap, in which Raadobarg appeals as a likely lad.Roger Varian's colt completed a spring hat-trick in novice and handicap company when he handled the Haydock mud in a valuable event in May.He then ran with credit back on quicker ground in the ultra-competitive Britannia Stakes at Royal Ascot - and after a near three-month break, was a close third at Doncaster.As long as he adapts to the Polytrack, he has a fine chance to return to winning ways.
