AMBION VIEW LOOKS GOOD AT EXETER

By Ashley Iveson, PA

Joe Tizzard has been firing in the winners in November so far and it is not too difficult to make a solid case for his Ambion View in the Galloping For Good Handelsbanken Handicap Hurdle at Exeter. The six-year-old shed his maiden tag over this course and distance in the early part of last season, claiming the notable scalp of Ace Of Spades, who has won several times since and is now rated 130. With that in mind it is perhaps a shade disappointing Ambion View has not managed to claim another victory since, but he has been placed on three occasions, most recently finishing second to J J Moon at Newton Abbot on what was his first appearance since April. Ambion View should be sharper for that run and while he is 3lb higher now, a revised rating of 123 still looks workable. Tom Symonds also has his string in excellent form at the moment and can add to his tally with Hystery Bere Pencarrie Derby Handicap Chase. It has been a while between drinks for this eight-year-old, whose solitary win over fences to date came in the spring of 2023, but he lines up for his latest assignment 8lb lower in the weights. A couple of runner-up finishes last season suggested all is not lost and while he was pulled up on his final start of last season, there were signs of promise in his reappearance run at Newton Abbot three and a half weeks ago. The handicapper has given him a chance by dropping him 3lb since and with all the headgear removed, his time to return to the winner's enclosure may have come. Katie's Melody has a good opportunity to make a successful start to her career over jumps in the Tozers Community Spirit Mares' Novices' Hurdle. Bought from Ireland after winning a point-to-point and finishing second in a Tipperary bumper, the five-year-old gave her new connections an immediate return on their investment when landing cramped odds in a National Hunt Flat race at Ffos Las a couple of weeks ago. She was made to work harder for that victory than was expected and sweated up beforehand and was keen during the race, but hopefully that first start since May will have taken the fizz out of her and it is notable she is stepped up in trip significantly for her hurdling bow. Doctor On Call looks the one beat in the Listen To The Odds Law Podcast Maiden Hurdle at Windsor. The Paul Nicholls-trained gelding beat a subsequent winner in Golden Sam when making a successful debut in a Hereford bumper last December and there was not too much wrong with his comeback effort when second on his first start over hurdles at Fontwell. Runners from this yard tend to improve significantly from their first runs of the season and Doctor On Call does not need to improve massively to go one better. Hardy Du Seuil could be the answer to the Windsor Call Fitzdares For Top Prices Handicap Hurdle. Jamie Snowden's charge was rated in the mid-130s at his peak, but gets into this field off 123 less the 7lb claim of Isabelle Ryder. While he appears to be struggling to rediscover his very best form, Hardy Du Seuil has been running well enough of late to suggest he is capable of making his presence felt off this sort of mark. A stellar field has assembled for the John Durkan Memorial Punchestown Chase in Ireland and over this track and trip it is difficult to oppose last year's winner Fact To File, with many of his stablemates and rivals warming up for even bigger targets further down the line.
